DMCI Mining workforce down 80% as of Q1

Background/Description of the Disclosure

DMCI Mining workforce down 80% as of Q1

DMCI Mining Corporation whose two nickel subsidiaries were issued suspension and closure orders by the Department of Environment and Natural Resources (DENR) middle of last year has cut its total workforce by 80 percent. This does not include the thousands of subcontracted and seasonal workers hired during production ramp up.

From 1,220 personnel in May 2016, its combined headcount went down to 240 as of March 31. The remaining personnel are mostly involved in back office and environmental rehabilitation works.

Berong Nickel Corporation (BNC) and Zambales Diversified Metals Corporation (ZDMC) have pending appeals to reopen with the Office of the President. With the change in DENR leadership, both companies are hopeful that their appeals will be given prompt, fair action.

"While awaiting the resolution of the appeals, we have instructed BNC and ZDMC to prepare their respective work programs and to track down their displaced workers. Hopefully, they can be rehired soon," said DMCI Mining president Cesar F. Simbulan, Jr.

Both companies are also continuing the reinforcement of their environmental management systems in line with their commitment to responsible mining.

BNC was awarded its ISO 14001 certification last March 16, after passing the stringent audits of TUV Rheinland Philippines last year. ZDMC is also expected to secure its ISO 14001 certification soon, as it is currently doing the certification procedures.

The ISO 14001 certification ensures that appropriate measures are in place so that mining operations leave minimal negative impacts on the environment.
